Lyons Tale

1965 Volume 12

Lyons Junior-Senior High School

Lyons, New York

Foreword :

there was a time

now, silence is - is vastness, dark, huge and dynamic

a creation.

The snow came down
And they were glad.
They have only
To play hard now,
For the future to them
Is yet play.

i remember when i looked up.

now i have grown. . .

or so i think.

they look up. they will grow too.

I make discoveries every day,
In such an undiscovered way.
The world smiles upon me,
And I upon it ;
We are very good friends, you know.

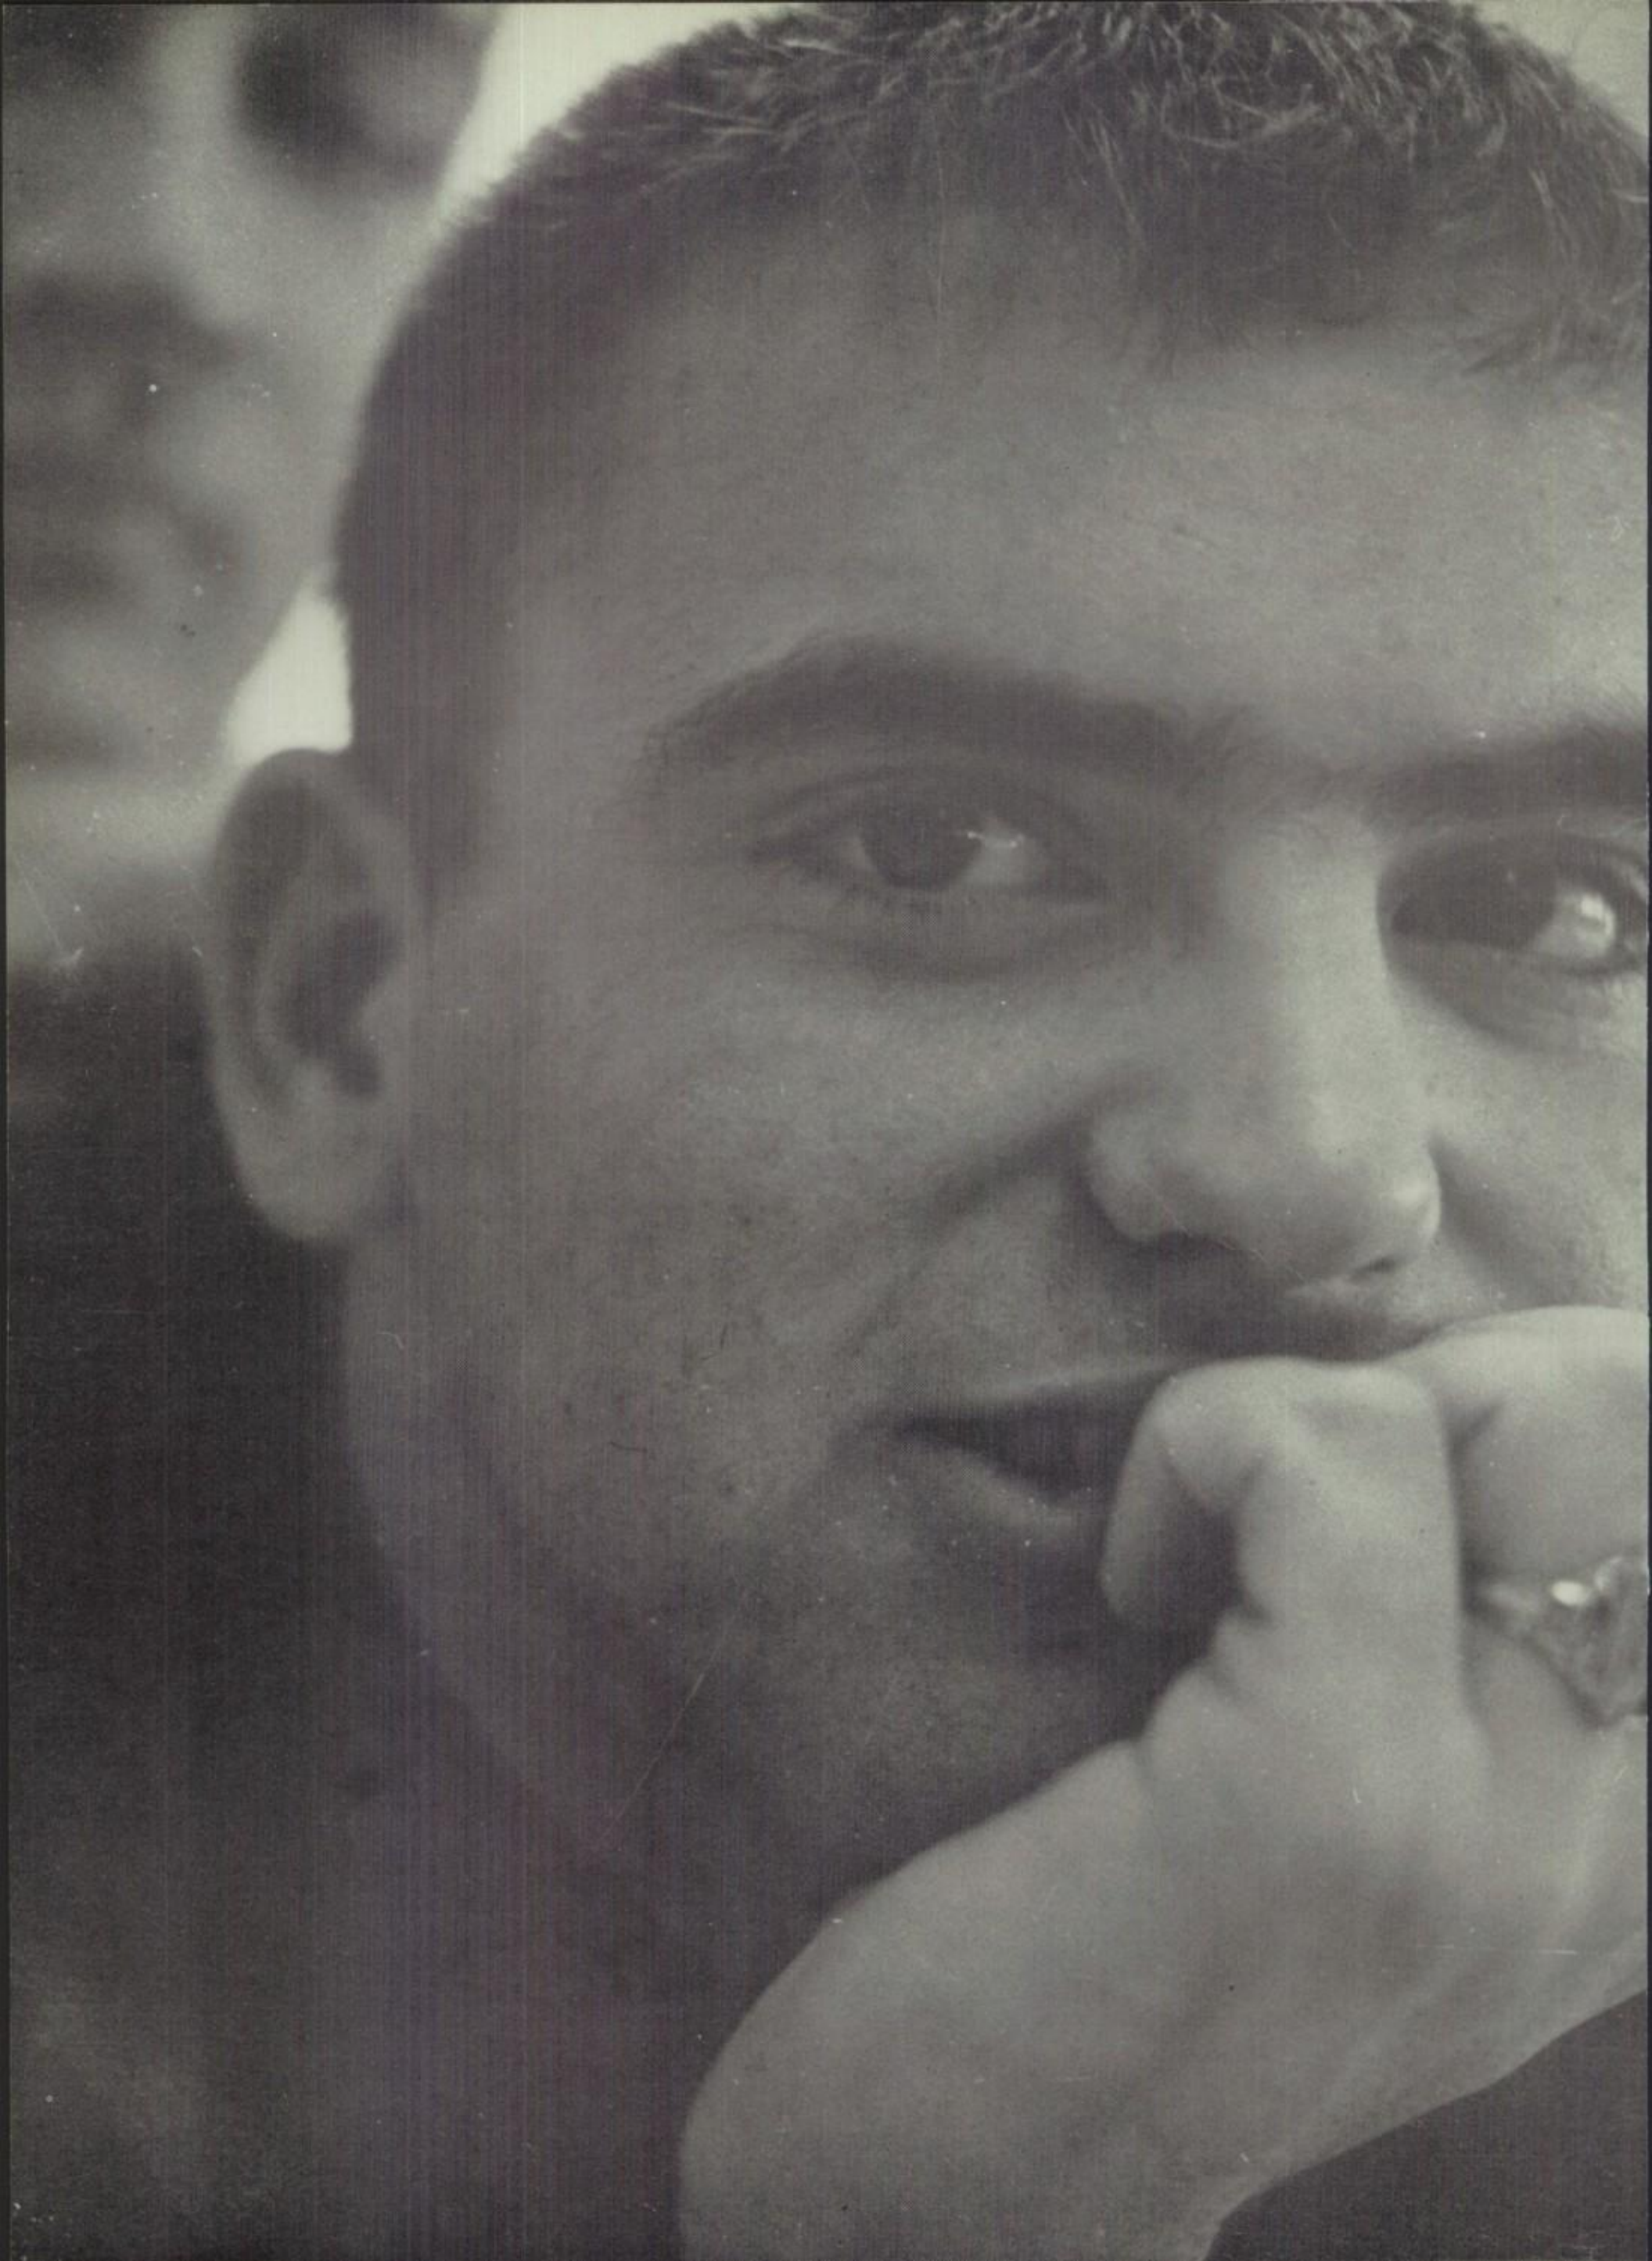
Miss Lynaugh, we, the class of 1965, thank you; not only for your assistance as our advisor, but also for the guidance you have given us as our teacher and our friend.

It is with much happiness that we dedicate this Lyons Tale to you.



thinking, dreaming, wanting.
people experience these yet they cannot be shared.

help comes from many faces.

a smile of inward satisfaction is felt deeply and is one of the greatest feelings a person may possess.

i was environed in pensiveness
and lived as i pleased.
it was fine.

words are signs
and their values are immeasurable.
there are other signs.

I sing of music!
For music sings to me.
Yes, from the very heart of the earth,
From the farthest depths of my soul,
Music sings to me.

As the voice of the horn carried over the hill,
Purer than purest light,
The eyes in the forest stopped stock-still,
Peering and wonderingly bright.

O, to make a melody!
A melody, gently rising, falling,
So to please,
Forever and for always ;
A melody with such strength
As to create sweet tears and laughter ;
A melody of life.
